

Abstract

A carton having a door and a method of making a carton having a door, the carton being adapted for automated assembly and/or loading by reducing or 5 eliminating interference between side panels of a door and product during loading and use of the door. In an aspect of the invention, the door side panels are slidable within a protected region formed between adjacent panels of the carton.

0996347 112304